Thurſday laſt His Excellency the Governor was pleaſed to make the following SPEECH to both Houſes, viz.

Gentlemen of the Council, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Repreſentatives, //

AS the chief Intention of this Seſſion, is to conſtitute the General Court for the Year enſuing, and the Seaſon makes a long Continuation of it very inconvenient, I muſt recommend to you to avoid all Buſineſs that can well be poſtponed to the next Seſſion.

Among thoſe Matters which will demand your immediate Attention, will be the providing for the Solicitation of the Cauſe of this Province with regard to the boundary Line with New-York. As you are contented with that Line, which has heretofore been reported by the Lords Commiſſioners for Trade and Plantations, and the Province in general has hitherto acquieſced in it, there is great Reaſon to expect that it will be confirmed.

I have ſent Copies of the Papers relating to the Treaty between the two Provinces concerning the Line, to the Secretary of the Board of Trade; and have prayed that this Province may have Time to appoint an Agent or Sollicitor, before their Cauſe is brought into Judgment. I ſhall write more fully upon the Subject, as Occaſion ſhall ſerve, and ſhall give this Buſineſs all the Aſſiſtance, which my Station and Ability will afford.

Council-Chamber, May 26, 1768. Fra. Bernard.

ALL Perſons that have any Demand on the Eſtate of Ambroſe Sloper, late of Boſton, Shipwright, deceaſed, are deſired to bring in their Accompts to Eſther Sloper, Executrix on ſaid Eſtate; and all ſuch as are indebted to ſaid Eſtate are deſired to make ſpeedy payment to ſaid Executrix, in order for a ſpeedy ſettlement.

…nd then declared John Wilkes, Esq; & George Cooke, Esq; duly elected. William Beckford, Esq; Sir George Colebrook, Sir Rich. Glyn, Sir Francis Blake Delaval, Mr. Alderman Shakespear, Mr. Cooke's son, and many other gentlemen, were on the hustings.

The infatuation for Mr. Wilkes was so great, that every person was obliged to declare for him, & have blue cockades, before they were admitted to poll.

The mob behaved in a very outrageous manner at Hyde-park corner, where they pelted Mr. Cook, son of the city marshall, and knocked him from his horse, took off the wheels of one of the carriages, cut the harness, and broke the glasses to pieces; several other carriages, with the friends of Messrs. Proctor and Cooke, were greatly damaged. The reason assigned for these proceedings is, that a flag was carried before the procession of Mr. Wilkes's antagonists, on which was painted, No Blasphemer.

A prodigious concourse of people assembled at Brentford, who would suffer no coaches to enter the town without No. 45, Wilkes and Liberty on them.

Several flags were flying with the motto, "More meat and fewer Cooks."

About nine last night, on the return of the pollers from Brentford, the mobility grew extremely riotous;—some persons who had voted in favour of Mr. Wilkes having put out lights, the mob paraded the whole town from east to west, obliging every body to illuminate, and breaking the windows of such as do it not immediately. The windows of the mansion-house, in particular, were demolished, together with a large chandelier and some pier-glasses, to the amount of many hundred pounds. They demolished also the windows of Lord Bute, Lord Egmont, Sir Samson Gideon, Sir William Mayne and many other gentlemen and tradesmen in most of the public streets of London and Westminster. At one of the above-mentioned gentlemens houses the mob were in a great measure irruated to it by the imprudence of a servant, who fired a pistol among them. At the Duke of Northumberland's house, the mob broke a few panes; but his Grace bid the address to get rid of them, by ordering lights immediately into his windows, and opening the Ship alehouse, which soon drew them off to that side.

Last night, a little past eleven, a party of the Guards arrived from the Tower, to quell the mob before the mansion house, who thereupon dispersed.

At Brentford a number of men in Mr. Wilkes's interest, attacked a party in Mr. Cooke's, and a battle began, when Mr. Wilkes entreated his adherents to be peaceable, and suffer the election to go on quietly and fairly; upon which the fray ended.

It was remarked, that several of the Livery of London, who lately voted against Mr. Wilkes at Guildhall, were the first to poll in his favour at Brentford.

We are credibly informed, that orders have been sent to his majesty's governors in America, for the future, to send over annually a true state of the trade and manufactures of their respective colonies.

We hear that an offer was made to Mr. Wilkes by his friends, that if he chose any one to be joint candidate with him, they would vote for them jointly, on which Mr. Wilkes replied, that he was infinitely obliged to them for the offer; but as the public had interested itself so much in his favor, he tho't himself sufficiently honored if they chose him, without presuming to dictate their choice of any one else, and very politely declined their offer.

March 31. They write from New-York, that a plan has lately been proposed to surround the city with regular fortifications, which it was expected would be adopted by Boston and Philadelphia.

The expences of the election at Northampton, at the lowest calculation is estimated at 60,000 l.

An opulent elector, in a certain borough in the west, was lately offered 50 l. a year and 700 l. in money, for his vote and interest, which he refused.

We are informed that an eminent ribbon merchant in the city has sold near 5000 l. worth of ribbons during the present general elections.

It is said the damage done to Lord B——'s house by the Mob on Monday night last, cannot be repaired for less than 500 l. a great deal of rich furniture having been broke to pieces.

Some persons have greatly reflected on Mr. Wilkes and his friends on account of the riots on the day of election; whereas it appears that he and they took all possible precautions to prevent tumults; by dispersing of 40,000 of the following hand-bills:

"Mr. Wilkes earnestly requests his friends, and intreats, that all possible measures may be used to preserve peace and good order through the whole of the approaching election for the county of Middlesex, to convince the world, that liberty is not joined with licentiousness."

The above was also printed in all the news-papers.

It is confidently asserted that Mr. Wilkes has ever since his exile enjoyed 1200 l. per ann. being a private subscription of a very few of his friends, among whom are several right hon. personages of the present m——y.

It is remarkable that the county of Middlesex, for which Mr. Wilkes is chosen one of the Representatives, is marked in the tables of reference to the counties of England, in Kitchen's map, No. 45.

Lord R——, we hear, has lost 1000 guineas to 30; by betting against Mr. Wilkes.

Last Saturday Lord Baltimore was tried at the assizes holden at Surry; for the Rape upon Sarah Woodcock, and acquitted; and at the same time Mrs. Grimsburg, and Mrs. Harvey, were tried as accessaries, and also acquitted.

April 2. A certain nobleman being asked by the——, what he apprehended would be the consequence of a late election? replied, as the gentleman was elected, he must take his seat accordingly.

Amongst the other pranks of their high and mightinesses, the Mob, on account of the Middlesex election, they stopped the French ambassador in his coach, and politely insisted on his drinking a draught of porter (which they offered him) to Wilkes and Liberty; with which his excellency with the greatest affability, complied.

One day last week as a great personage was going to Richmond, accompanied by his illustrious consort, a rabble in the road thither, gathered round his carriage, clamorously begging a pardon for W. and grew so numerous and troublesome, that the great personages thought proper to return to town.

We also hear that one of the brothers of the above great personage, was stopped by the mob near Brentford, in his carriage, and they insisted on his pulling off his hat, and hollow out, Wilkes & Liberty.

A gentleman from Dover says, that on Tuesday evening the whole town was illuminated, as was also every town he travelled through, till he came to London.

We hear that the Duke of Cumberland's house was illuminated on Monday night, and that lights were put out at St. James's, in compliance with the populace.—— Such a prudent compliance at the mansion-house, would have prevented much damage.

At the Earl of Northumberland's the populace were told to go to a neighboring ale-house to drink at the Earl's expence, whilst the servants prepared candles; and the company, both gentlemen and ladies, flung up the sashes, and held out candles in their hands till the servants had properly illuminated the windows.

We have it confirmed to us, that by the assistance of his friends (the subscription being still open) and particularly a very amiable, patriotic nobleman, that all Mr. Wilkes's debts will be positively adjusted, settled, and satisfied, previous to the ensuing session of parliament.

The general toast among the friends of the popular patriot now is, May Liberty never want a Wilkes; and may Wilkes never want liberty.

Mr. Wilkes's declaration of a surrender it is said renders the outlawry void, provided he surrenders according to the declaration, the first of next term.

The town of Brenton was illuminated on monday evening, and the utmost joy appeared on the occasion.

The following Toasts is drank every Night in the most polite Companies about Town "May the light of Liberty never be put out by a Scotch Extinguisher!"

Among the many Houses of Persons of Distinction at the West End of the Town, that were illuminated on Tuesday Night, on Account of Mr. Wilkes's being elected Knight of the Shire for the County of Middlesex, were those of their Royal Highness the Dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland.

On Tuesday Night the Mob broke the Windows of his Grace the Duke of Argyle's House in Soho-Square, and also the Windows of his Son, the Marquis of Lorn's House in Argyle-Buildings, where they did considerable Damage. Every Window belonging to the Right Hon. the Lord Bute's House in South-Audley Street were so broke, that scarce a Pane of Glass was left whole.

We hear that it has already cost one Candidate for a Borough Northward, who it is expected, will lose his Election, at least, upwards of thirty Thousand Pounds.

The Codicil of the Will of Sir Andrew Chadwick, Knight, in Favour of Mr. Wilkes, is couched in the following Terms; "Item, I give and bequeath to John Wilkes, Esq; late Member of Alesbury, the Sum of 1000l, as a Testimony of my Approbation of his intrepid Conduct in opposing a wicked, corrupt, and profligate Administration."

We hear that a Number of People will soon embark for America, at the Expence of the Government to settle there with their Families.

Ministry & Thing v Wilkes

BOSTON, May 30.

At a Meeting of the Freeholders and other Inhabitants of the Town of Boston, on Monday last, Joshua Henshaw, Esq; Mr. Henderson Inches, and Samuel Pemberton, Esq; were chosen Selectmen, in the Room of Samuel Sewall, Esq; William Philips, Esq; and Mr. Timothy Newell, who had previously declined serving in that Office.

The last Week bro't us an Account of the Death of Mr. EDMUND QUINCY, Tertius, late of this Town Merchant; who sailed from hence in the beginning of March last, to try the efficacy of a sea-air for the recovery of his declining health: He arrived at Bermudas about the middle of March, but being advis'd, by the physicians of that place, he soon re-embarked in order to go round the islands; when in a few days his disorder increased and he expir'd, on the last of that month, in the 35th year of his age.

The character of a merchant, Mr. Quincy supported with a reputation for the most strict integrity. In his commercial circle, to give bread to the indigent, and to fulfil his engagements, with regular punctuality, to all mankind, was the true character of this humane and upright man.

As a scholar, he justly claimed distinction. Apprehending mysterious and abstruse speculation could little benefit the interest of society or advance the republic of letters, that gentleman ever deem'd a minute enquiry into metaphysical and occult science below the dignity of a benevolent and enlarg'd mind: Hence a peculiar dislike for the unedifying jargon of scholastic theology tinctur'd all his sentiments of those unimportant disquisitions.—Yet he explor'd the prolific regions of mathematical and philosophic knowledge with that diligent study which abundantly compensated his assidious application. But as a warm friend to the Rights of men; a zealous defender of the liberties confirm'd by our happy constitution; as an inveterate, but open, enemy to every bawd of power and minion of oppression, the life of this patriotic gentleman exhibits a truely laudable example to the world.

It was Mr. Quincy's lot to live in that period when America was groaning under the burdens and impositions of arbitrary power; when she rous'd from a supine lethargy and nobly struggled for freedom. He saw the calamities of his native soil, he felt it's wrongs, and was fill'd with the keenest indignation against its barbarous oppressors. With truth could he say———Quæq ipse miserrima vidi,

Et quorum pars magna fui.

The sensibility of his heart ever paid the tribute of a tear to the distresses of humanity: the sagacious penetration of his understanding display'd the fullest view of the impending dangers of American slavery: the soundness of his head pointed out to him the only political salvation of his country: the integrity of his soul determined him to pursue, with invariable constancy, the best methods to retrieve its deplorable state.—To animate his below'd countrymen with the generous ardor of disinterested patriotism—to fire their minds with the ethereal spark of public virtue, was the professed aim of his spirited department, the distinguishing characteristic of the man. Little solicitous what offence this virtuous, independent behavior gave to base, ignoble, and abandoned persons, he persevered unconcernedly to the end. It was his political creed, that pusillanimity was inconsistent with a true affection to the glorious cause of Liberty—Hence he was unintimidated by all the threats of powerful insolence: hence he was unmov'd by all the illiberal abuse and slander of slavish hirelings; to whose resentment and rage he knew himself obnoxious in proportion to his genuine worth and merit.

In a social view, Mr. Quincy was a hearty, unfeigned friend; and wherever he made professions of attachment he was inflexibly firm and steady: In a political view, he claims our highest esteem.——Few men, ancient or modern, have more deserv'd the applause of mankind: unremitted were his endeavours for the safety and happiness of the common-wealth; uncorrupted his heart by the allurements of power, wealth or ambition: an intrepid assertor of the immutable Rights of nature and a staunch advocate for the invaluable Liberties of Britons, he, with justice, bears the high appellation of a warm patriot, the august title of A TRUE ENGLISHMAN.

In short, Mr. Quincy is one of those public-spirited worthies, whose virtues posterity shall commemorate with gratitude, whose memory they shall bless, and whose exalted characters they shall revere, without knowing the particular individuals to whom they shall be under the greatest obligations: the history of whose renowned deeds the babes of futurity shall be taught to rehearse, whose magnanimous struggles in the cause of freedom shall inspire emulation, when the names of those who sought to subjugate America to bondage, to turn a land of light into darkness, and lord it over the heritage of God, shall be buried in eternal forgetfulness or remembered only with infamy and execration.

O lost too soon!—yet why lament a fate
By thousands envied, and by Heaven approv'd?
Rare is the born to those of longer date
To live, to die, admir'd, esteem'd, belov'd.
No further seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode,
(There they alike in trembling hope repose)
The bosom of his Father and his God.

Capt. John Miller, in a Sloop, from the Coast of Barbary, bound to Demerara, was spoke by Capt. Jarvis, in Latt. 7, all well.

It may be depended on that a Warrant is received by which the Board of Commissioners here are ordered to pay Lieutenant-Governor HUTCHINSON Two Hundred Pounds Sterling a Year out of the American Revenues established by Parliament. And that the same being mentioned in the House last Week, there was no Man found to deny it. On the contrary it was insisted on by one Gentleman that the more Pensions were granted the better.

ANECDOTES of JOHN WILKES, Esq; Member of Parliament for the County of Middlesex.

FEW persons have more engaged the attention of the public than Mr. Wilkes, the reputed author of that famous paper Number 45, in the North-Briton. He was member of parliament for Aylesbury in Buckinghamshire, and colonel of that county militia when that paper appeared, which was on Saturday the 23d of April, 1763. This bold satire provoked the ministry to the highest degree, and a general warrant was issued on the 30th of the same month under the hand and seal of the earl of Halifax, then one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, directed to four of the king's messengers, by virtue of which Mr. Wilkes and all his papers were seized. Application was immediately made to the court of common-pleas, then sitting in Westminster-hall, for a writ of habeas corpus. But the necessary forms requiring some time before the writ could be obtained, Mr. Wilkes was sent to the Tower, though it was well known that the request for the writ of habeas corpus was granted. Nor was this the whole, the ministry would not suffer Mr. Wilkes to see any of his friends, though many made application for admission.

It was now necessary to apply for a second writ of habeas corpus, the king's messengers, to whom the first was directed, having returned it with an indorsement on the back; setting forth, that the body of the said John Wilkes, Esq; was not in their custody. Another writ was directed to the constable of his majesty's Tower of London. In obedience to this writ, Mr. Wilkes was brought on Wednesday the 3d of May, about eleven in the morning, by the lieutenant of the Tower, to the court of common-pleas. The matter was debated some time before Mr. Wilkes was brought into court; the point in question was the legality of his commitment, and he was desired to offer bail. He replied, he had no bail, nor would offer any; adding, that he had been apprehended, his papers rummaged and seized, and himself committed close prisoner to the Tower, being debarred even the privilege of seeing his friends. About two in the afternoon the court broke up, and Mr. Wilkes was remanded back to the Tower, with an order that his friends should have admittance to him, and that he should be brought again into court on the Friday following. This was accordingly done, when Mr. Wilkes himself opened the business by a very spirited speech to the court, in which he observed that the question then to be determined was, to know whether English liberty was a reality, or a shadow. "Your own free-born hearts, added he, will feel with indignation and compassion all that load of oppression, under which I have so long laboured. Close imprisonment, the effect of premeditated malice; all access for more than two days denied to me; my house ransacked and plundered; my most private and secret concerns divulged; every vile and malignant insinuation, even of high-treason itself, no less industriously than falsely circulated, by my cruel and implacable enemies, together with all the various insolence of office, form but a part of my unexampled ill-treatment."

Lord chief-justice Pratt then declared, though Mr. Wilkes's commitment was not illegal, yet his privilege as a member of parliament was not destroyed, and therefore ordered him to be discharged. Upon this determination Mr. Wilkes returned his thanks to the court for their decision, and went to his house in Great-George-street, attended by an infinite multitude of people, who expressed their satisfaction at this event by repeated acclamations.

At the meeting of the parliament, the North-Briton No. 45, was voted a false, scandalous and seditious libel; and Mr. Wilkes was ordered to attend the house, but having been wounded in a duel, could not obey: after his recovery he retired to France, on which he was expelled the house.

On the 6th of January, the lord chief justice declared general warrants to be illegal, and a verdict was given against Mr. Wood, then under secretary of state, with 1000l. damages, for seizing Mr. Wilkes's papers.

But on the 19th of February, 1764, Mr. Wilkes was found guilty of re-publishing the North-Briton, No. 45, with notes, and also of printing and publishing the essay on woman: and he not appearing to the proper summons, was outlawed, since which he has resided in different parts abroad, and is at last returned to his native country, and, with a boldness almost peculiar to himself, submitted to the laws of his country, the liberty of which he has so nobly defended, to the entire satisfaction of every lover of liberty; and as an instance of gratitude in his countrymen, he has been elected by a great majority, member of parliament for Middlesex.

TAKES this Method to inform all thoſe that are indebted to him, either on Book, Note or Bond, to make immediate Payment, and eſpecially thoſe which have been of a long Date ſtanding; the neglect of which will oblige him to the very diſagreeable Task of lodging their Accounts in the Hands of an Attorney, to be ſued to July Court, which is near at Hand.

Said GOULD Has to ſell at his Store, the beſt Sort of Pot and Pearl Aſh. The Pot-Aſh he recommends to be the very ſuperior Sort, as good or better than any heretofore ſold, which is made at his Works, and prepared for making of ſoft Soap. If the Inhabitants both in Town and Country would come into this Method in making their Family Soap, (with Pot-Aſh thus prepared) they would ſoon find by Experience better Soap than in making it the old Way, by ſetting Leaches, and running the Riſque whether Soap or not. He purchaſes Aſhes delivered at his Works near the North Mills, and promiſes to take all that is made, provided the above Method be comply'd with.—He has likewiſe a Man, Horſe and Cart conſtantly collecting them, and has to beg the Favor that Care may be taken not to ſweep any Dirt or Sand into the Fire, being very prejudicial to the Aſhes——CASH given by ſaid Gould for unmerchantable Pot Aſh, and well dry'd Salts for calcining.
